Dear Sirs:

There have been some vital issues raised at Stanford during the last few weeks. In the near future you are going to make some decisions concerning these questions, and these decisions will be of consequence to people around the world.

We are a group of individuals convinced of the critical nature of these questions and of the action you take. And we are deeply committed to the propositions that these questions be resolved according to the requests of the April Third Coalition.

As an expression of our commitment and of our sense of the urgency of these questions, we have begun fasting, and will continue fasting until we receive a positive response from you, the Trustees toward a morally acceptable resolution of these questions.
