

28 More Face SJC; Only ROTC Blockaded

Forty demonstrators marched to the North County Court House Wednesday to protest felony charges brought against student Burnell Mack. Twenty-eight other demonstrators blocking the ROTC building identified themselves today and now face hearings before the Stanford Judicial Council (SJC).

The marchers, moving from the main Quad to the Court House on Grant Avenue in Palo Alto, joined another 40 including a number of black students at the courtroom in protesting Mack's arrest April 29 during night-time campus demonstrations.

Mack's plea on charges of assault with a deadly weapon and resisting arrest was put over to 10 a.m. May 20 by Municipal Judge J. Barton Phelps. The student remains free on $1,000 bond.

Mack, a junior in political science, and members of the Black Students Union (BSU) at Stanford allege that he was beaten so badly by police that he could barely speak.

Meanwhile, 29 students identified themselves as "practicing civil disobedience" in blocking entry to the ROTC building and entrances to the Armory across the street. They must attend a preliminary SJC hearing by noon today, or face suspension from Stanford for the remainder of this quarter. Twelve demonstrators who identified themselves Tuesday faced the SJC yesterday and had hearings set for June 1. The total number of SJC disciplinary cases is now 112.

Photographs Studied

Photographs of an additional 25 to 50 persons who refused to identify themselves Tuesday and did not leave the Electronics Research Laboratories' entrances when ordered to are still being studied by University officials.

Demonstrators said yesterday that starting once again at 8:00 a.m. they intend to keep the ROTC building closed for the tenth day. At 7:45 this morning student pickets will again demonstrate in front of the shipping and receiving area of the physical plants on Campus Drive—the central delivery point for all university office supplies.

Research Forum

At 10:00 this morning the Committee on Research Policy and the Engineering Department will jointly sponsor a symposium on Defense Department research. A mass meeting of the Stanford community is scheduled for 4:00 this afternoon in White Plaza.

Police report that five molotov cocktails were discovered in Frost Amphitheatre early Wednesday afternoon. They were spotted and reported to police by a male student running the amphitheatre rim for exercise.

Five Chief Frank Jurian stated that five gasoline filled bottles with wicks were found next to a half empty one-gallon glass jug of gasoline. They were located just inside the amphitheatre fence behind the Armory on Galvez Street.

The Hewlett-Packard/Industrial Park Group, which leafleted the electronics plant Tuesday, agreed yesterday to meet this morning with three vice-presidents of the company to discuss the group's demands. Demands include access to the plant grounds for dissemination of petitions and closing of the plant at some time in the near future for a Southeast Asia teach-in and "fair."

Registrar Harvey Hall announced yesterday that individual faculty members and departments were made responsible for determining the appropriate means of evaluating spring quarter academic work. In a campus memorandum, Hall urged individual departments to establish appropriate guidelines "to maintain equity and to minimize conflicts" in academic work evaluation.

"Ultimately, individual instructors must decide the best way to evaluate the accomplishments of students under conditions which have existed for the latter part of this quarter," he added.
