DIRECTOR'S OFFICE
STANFORD UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES

Attached is a listing of non-University users of the Stanford Computation Center. This list has been developed according to the following parameters:

- 1) those users who have open accounts as of this date, and
- 2) who have used their accounts during the last four months.

The information provided is the name of the company which contracted for use of the Center. In the instance where the user is an individual not affiliated with a company, we have shown the user's name. In this latter case are mostly students, faculty or staff using the Center for educational or research purposes.

Each user of the Center must sign a document which includes the following statement:

To protect the University's obligation under the manufacturers educational allowance programs and non-profit tax-free position, the use of computers must be restricted to educational activity. This is defined as instructional or research use which is non-proprietary, publishable, and performed by the Faculty, Students or Staff. The Computation Center expects your cooperation in limiting the use to these activities or advising it of your use which does not meet this restriction.
